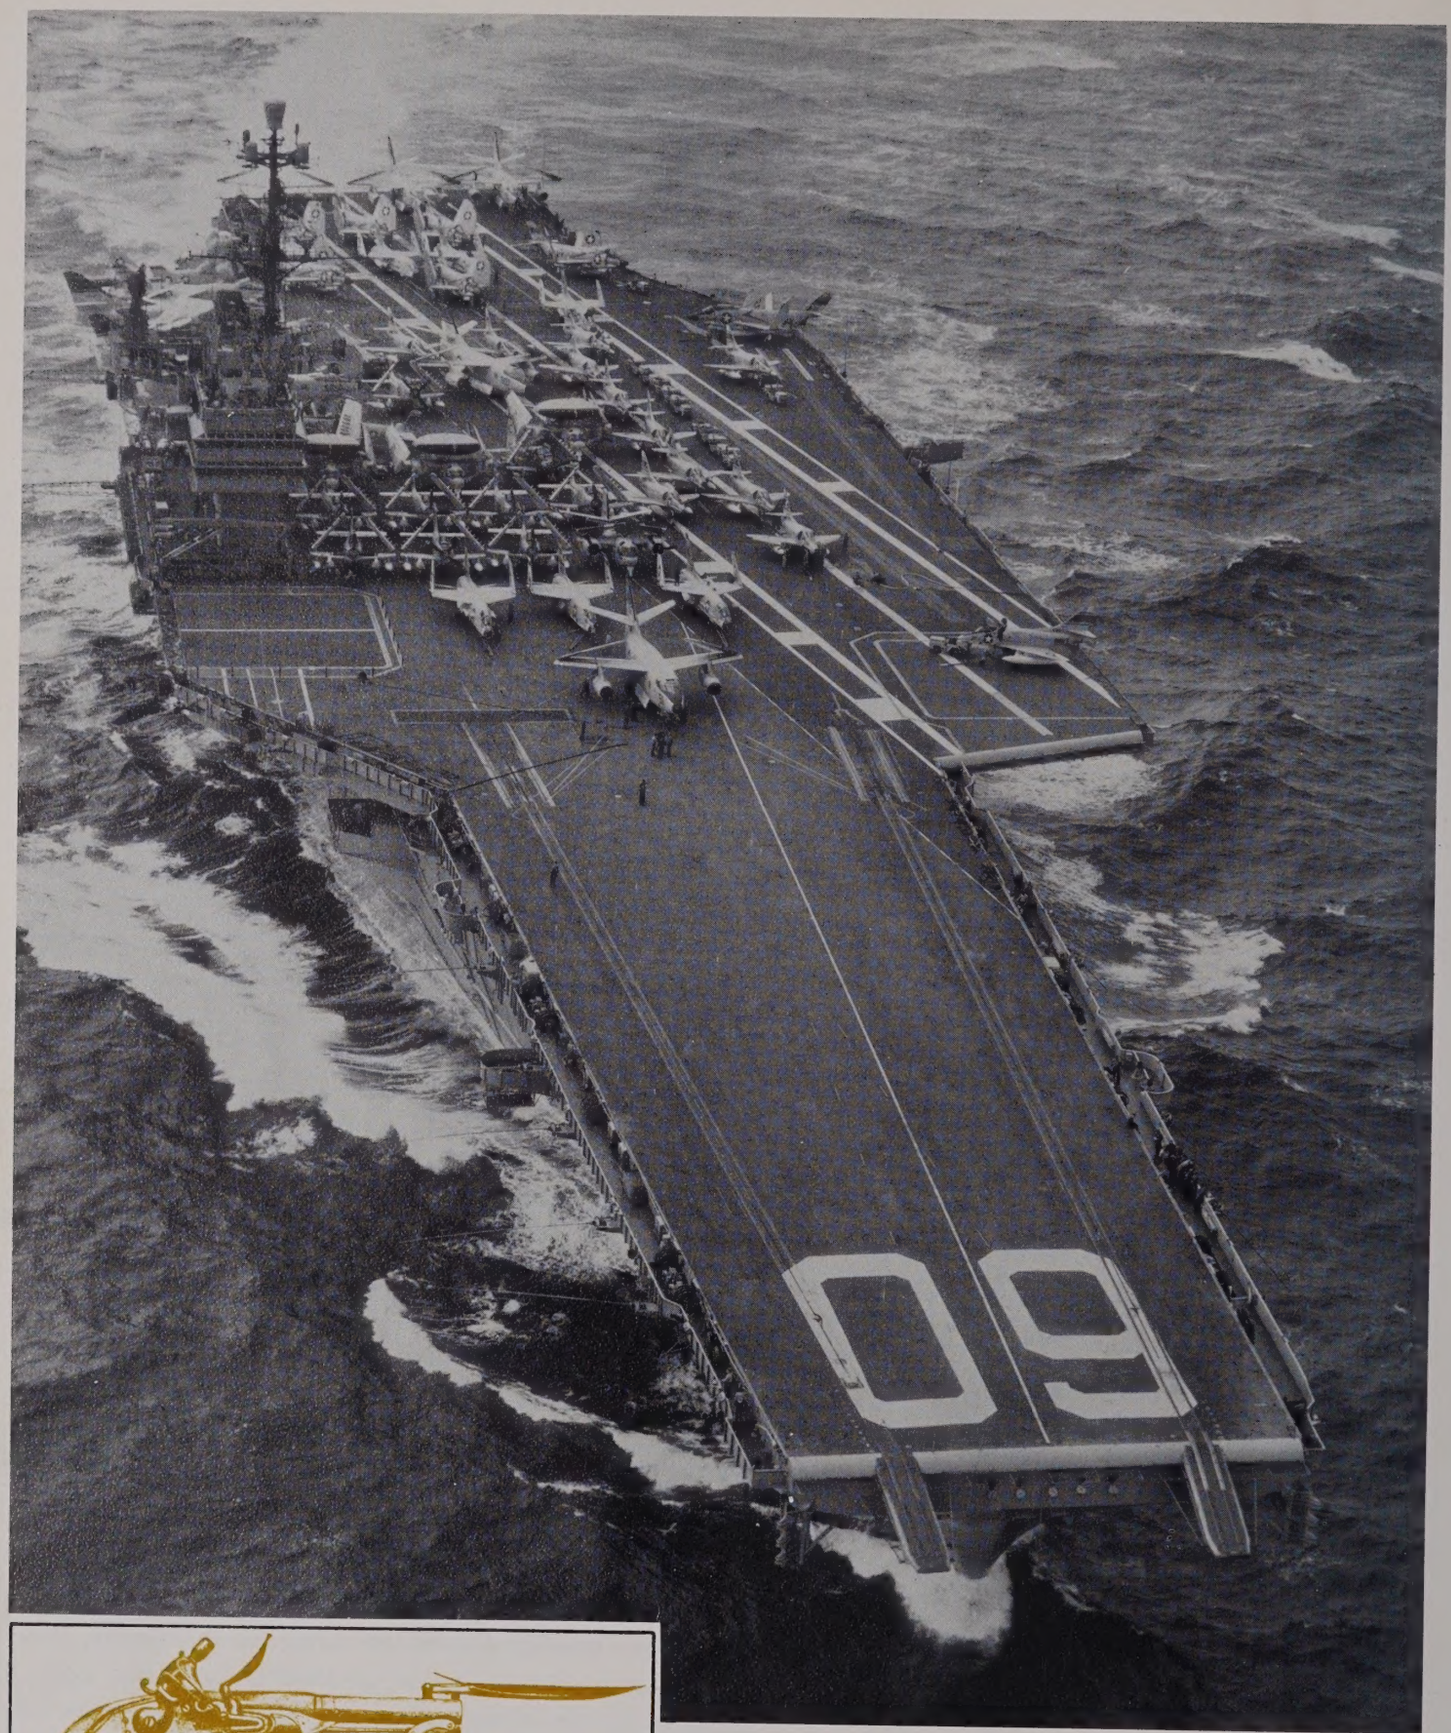
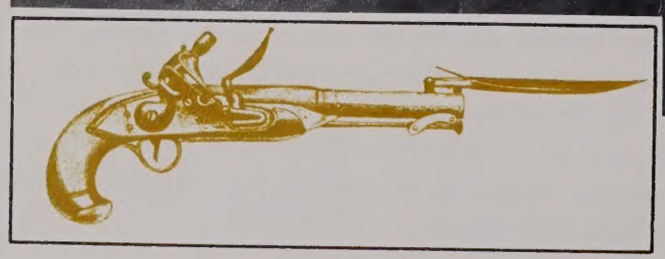
THE WORLD OF SARATOGA

WHERE . . . .

"No man is an island, entire of itself; every man is a piece of the Continent, a part of the main . . . "

SARATOGA — This has been our Continent . . . our World. A world of remarkable individuality, purpose and mission. We were individuals when we came into this world, SARATOGA, and sometimes our greatest struggle has been in clinging to this individuality . . . while at the same time learning to become integral members of a unique and masculine society. A society of potential fighting men, where . . . "no man is an island" . . . SARATOGA.





Somehow the word, the very thought, permeates one's being with a tingling sensation of excitement. No matter how many times we may have wished ourselves some other place, always, in recollection, our thoughts of her are warm.

Hear Ye!
Hear Ye!

The name SARATOGA is as old as our Independence . . .

Since the memorable day of 17 October 1777 at Saratoga, New York, when the British General Burgoyne surrendered his army to the American Continental forces under General Gates, there has been a fighting ship in the United States Navy bearing the name SARATOGA. The decisive American victory at Saratoga marked the turning point in the American Revolution, for it brought French financial aid and sea power to the cause of American independence. The capture of Burgoyne's army was made possible by a small squadron of vessels on Lake Champlain in 1776 which, in defeat, . . . had so delayed the planned British invasion that their Army had to withdraw to winter quarters in Canada. Making full use of this breathing spell, General Washington and the Continental Congress assembled the force which was victorious at Saratoga.

Therefore, it has been truly fitting to have commemorated this historic battle with a total of six United States naval vessels named SARATOGA. In addition, two Revolutionary War privateers, one in the War of 1812, and many merchant vessels have also carried this name.

Continental Sloop of War Saratoga

The ship rigged 18-gun Continental sloop-of-war, built by Wharton and Humphreys at Philadelphia and launched 10 April, 1780, was the first American naval vessel named SARATOGA.

The first and only captain was John Young of Philadelphia. During the year 1780 as a unit of the Continental Navy, SARATOGA cruised with marked success against British merchantmen. In one encounter she simultaneously engaged two British vessels the ship ELIZABETH, 28 guns, and the brig NANCY, 14 guns. After a spirited hour-long engagement both enemy vessels were taken prize.

As part of a merchant fleet escort, SARATOGA sailed from Haiti on 15 March 1781. Three days later she parted company with the convoy in chase of two strange ships. She captured one vessel and when last seen was in pursuit of the second. SARATOGA disappeared over the horizon and was never heard of again. She is presumed to have sunk, and to have carried down with her the gallant Captain Young and his crew of 6 officers and 80 men. The first SARATOGA was 68 feet in length; 25 feet at the beam; displacement of 150 tons; and armament consisting of 16 nine-pounders and 2 four-pounders.

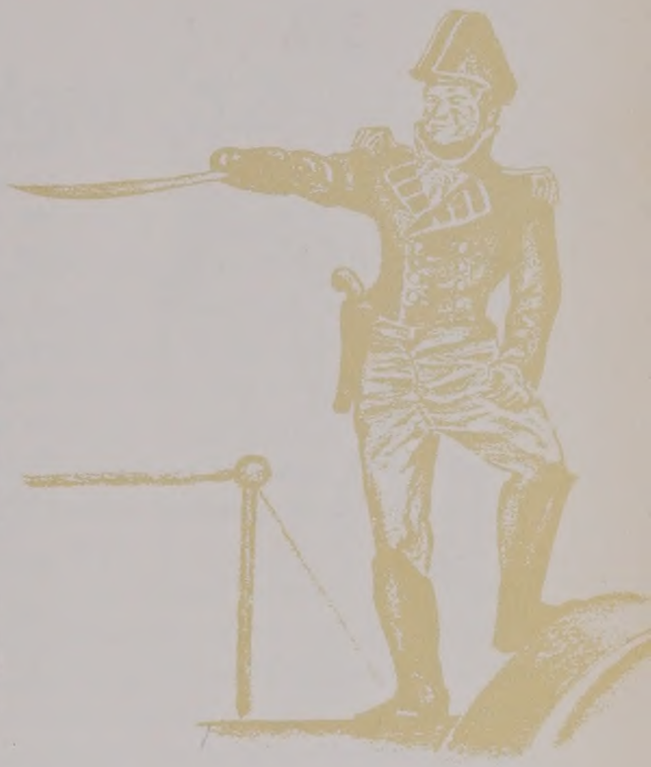
U. S. Corvette Saratoga

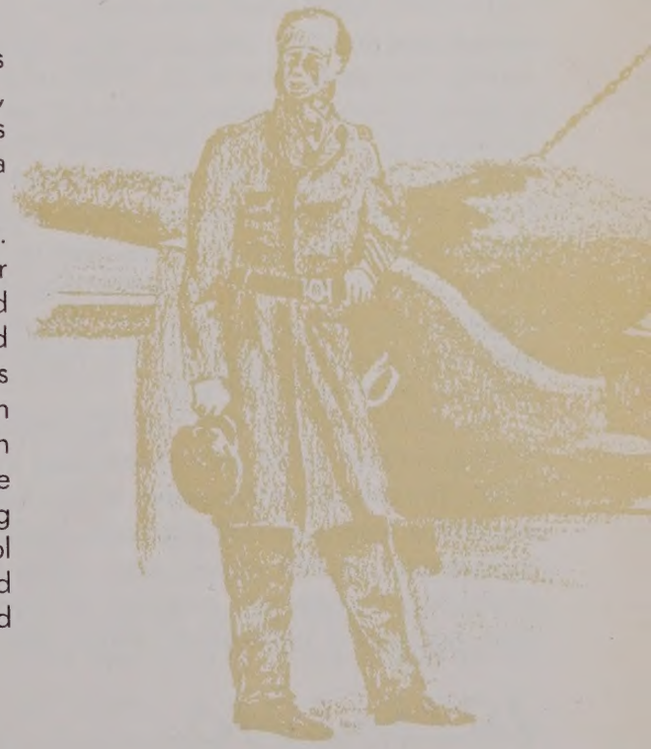


Fame came to the second SARATOGA on Lake Champlain in the War of 1812. The ship-rigged corvette was built at Vergennes, Vermont, by Adam and Noah Brown under the direction of Commodore MacDonough. On 11 April 1814 SARATOGA was commissioned, and soon afterwards under the lee of Cumberland Head, the American and British fleets were joined in battle. Commodore MacDonough flying his flag aboard SARATOGA, exchanged furious broadsides with the heavier gunned British flagship CONFIANCE. At a critical moment, when both ships were badly shattered, MacDonough, by executing a skillful maneuver, was able to pivot the SARATOGA so as to bring a hitherto unexposed side of the ship and a fresh broadside battery to bear on the enemy. The commodore, foreseeing the possibility, provided anchors and springlines which enabled him to wind the ship. The CONFIANCE, unable to complete the same maneuver, struck her colors within 15 minutes followed in short order by the remainder of the British force.

In 1815, SARATOGA was laid up and sold out of the naval service in 1825 at Whitehall, New York. She was 143 in length, 36 feet at the beam and the displacement was 734 tons. A complement of 240 officers and men was embarked aboard, and she carried eight long 24 pounders, six carronade 42 pounders, and twelve carronade 32 pounders.

1814–1825

U. S. Sloop Saratoga



The third naval vessel to bear the name SARATOGA was a first class sloop of 20 guns, built at the Naval Yard, Portsmouth, New Hampshire, and launched on 26 July 1842. She performed routine squadron duties until the Mexican War when she joined the blockading squadron off Vera Cruz.

During 1847 she was commanded by Commander David G. Farragut. The SARATOGA was transferred to the West India Squadron in 1847 after serving with the fleet during negotiations for the treaty which opened Japan. She spent time off the coast of Africa in search of slavers and while doing so she captured a slave ship carrying a cargo of 961 slaves in 1860. SARATOGA's Civil War services included commerce protection against Confederate raiders and blockading duties as a part of the South Atlantic Blockading Squadron. During the years following the war she was laid up, but from 1878 to 1887 she was employed as a training ship for naval apprentices. Loaned in 1890 to Pennsylvania as a school ship for nautical training she was sold in 1907. Displacing 882 tons and carrying 210 officers and men, she was armed with four 8 inch guns and eighteen 32 pounders.

1842–1907

U. S. Cruiser Saratoga

The fourth ship named SARATOGA was so named for only part of her naval service. She was launched on 2 December 1891 as the armored cruiser NEW YORK at the William Cramp and Sons Shipyard, Philadelphia. Her name was changed to SARATOGA on 16 February 1911 while she was flagship of the Atlantic Squadron.

On 1 December 1917, her name was changed to the USS ROCHESTER. World War I escort duty was followed by participation in the Nicaraguan Campaign, 1926-1931, and duty off China in 1932. The ROCHESTER was decommissioned at Cavite on 29 April 1933, and she was stricken from the list of active naval ships on 28 October 1938. Towed into Subic Bay Channel on 24 December 1941, she was sunk to prevent capture by the Japanese.

Her overall statistics were 380 feet in length; 64 feet at the beam; a displacement of 8,150 tons and a complement of 34 officers and 525 men. She was armed with six 8 inch breech loading rifles, twelve 4 inch rapid fire guns, four Gatling guns, and three 21 inch submerged torpedo tubes.

1891-1938

U. S. Carrier Saratoga

The fifth SARATOGA was launched in 1925. Though launched as an aircraft carrier, she had originally been planned as a battle cruiser. During the years preceding WWII, she served as one of the testing grounds of naval aviation. During the war, she served in the Battle of the Solomons in 1942, in the first carrier raid on Tokyo in 1944 as a part of Task Force 58, and in the bitterly fought battle of Iwo Jima.

The veteran carrier completed her wartime service performing training duties at Pearl Harbor. From the date of her commissioning until the end of the war (a period of 18 years) a total of 89,195 landings had been made on her deck. She joined the "Magic Carpet Fleet" after the Japanese surrender bringing home 29,000 Pacific war veterans, a larger number than any other individual ship.

The battle scarred lady was swallowed up by the waters of Bikini Atoll as a result of an underwater blast in the Atomic Bomb test, 25 July 1946. The overall displacement of this SARATOGA was 33,000 tons and she had a length of 909 feet with a width of 106 feet at the beam. A complement of 195 officers and 1,676 men made up the ship's crew. World War II armament consisted of sixteen 5 inch .38 caliber dual purpose guns, plus batteries of 40mm and 20mm anti-aircraft guns.

1925-1946

Saratoga '62

The heavy attack carrier, USS SARATOGA (CVA-60) was constructed at the New York Naval Shipyard, Brooklyn, New York, and is the sixth vessel so named. The latest SARATOGA, one of the world's largest warships, was built at a cost of $207 million. She was commissioned on 14 April 1956, with Captain Robert J. Stroh in command. The carrier left her berth at the New York Naval Shipyard on 9 August 1956, enroute to Norfolk, Virginia, and Mayport, Florida, readying for her shakedown cruise in the Caribbean in September 1956.

On 1 December 1956, Captain R. B. Moore relieved Captain Stroh and became SARATOGA's second commanding officer. On 19 December 1956, she returned to the New York Naval Shipyard for several months.

After her yard period and a refresher training cruise in the Caribbean, SARATOGA returned to Mayport, Florida. On 6 June President Dwight D. Eisenhower with members of his cabinet boarded SARATOGA to observe operations aboard the giant warship. For two days, SARATOGA and eighteen other ships put on a demonstration of naval prowess that included air operations, anti-submarine warfare, guided missile operations, and a display of the Navy's latest techniques of bombing and strafing. Highlighting this Presidential visit was the historic flight of two F8U Crusaders which flew non-stop from the West-coast based carrier BON HOMME RICHARD to the flight deck of SARATOGA in the Atlantic.

Upon completion of a summer extensive training, SARATOGA made her maiden voyage across the Atlantic sailing from Mayport on 3 September 1957 to join OPERATION STRIKEBACK, the massive NATO naval exercise in the Norwegian Sea.

Returning home, SARA moved to the Norfolk Naval Shipyard where she underwent repairs for six weeks. On 17 December 1957, Captain Alfred R. Matter relieved Captain R. B. Moore as SARATOGA's commanding officer. With Captain Matter at the helm, SARATOGA sailed for Mayport to conduct operations off the Florida coast.

On 1 February 1958, SARATOGA departed Mayport and proceeded to Gibraltar where she officially became a member of the United States Sixth Fleet. On 14 July she was ordered from Cannes, France, to the troubled waters off the coast of Lebanon for the following two months. One of the outstanding highlights of the cruise was the visit of their Royal Hellenic Majesties, the King and Queen of Greece, King Paul and Queen Fredericka. The royal couples, along with members of their families and guests, witnessed a powerful SARATOGA air demonstration on the 16th day of June. After an eight month tour of duty in the Mediterranean, SARATOGA returned to the United States.

After completing repairs at the Norfolk Naval Shipyard in Portsmouth, SARATOGA stopped briefly at the New York Naval Shipyard for her finishing touches and then departed again for her home port in Mayport.

Upon arrival at Mayport, the air group, CARRIER AIR GROUP THREE, was loaded on board and extensive preparation began for the ship's departure to Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, for training. After the training period in the Caribbean SARATOGA operated out of her home of Mayport with the U. S. Second Fleet, and then began making preparations for her forthcoming Mediterranean cruise.

Then on August 15, 1959, she began her third trip across the Atlantic and joined, for the second time, the SIXTH Fleet, now under the command of VADM G. W. Anderson, Jr. VADM Anderson had been relieved as Commander Carrier Division SIX on August 5 by RADM T. H. Moorer. SARATOGA was under the command of Captain John J. Hyland, who had relieved Captain Matter in October 1958. During this deployment Captain Hyland was relieved by Captain Allan F. Fleming in November 1959. The successful cruise came to an end when SARATOGA steamed into her home port in Mayport, Florida, on February 26, 1960.

After approximately a month of rest, liberty and leave for the crew, she went to the New York Shipyard for maintenance work on her well deserving hull. After her yard period, throughout the summer months of 1960 SARATOGA operated with the U.S. SECOND Fleet with in-port periods in Mayport.

Early in August in 1960, SARATOGA received orders to rejoin the SIXTH Fleet in the Mediterranean and "bolster" America's readiness. SARATOGA left for the Mediterranean on 22 August. She entered the Mediterranean on 1 September and departed on 5 September for the North Atlantic. There, north of the Arctic Circle, she participated with other forces of NATO in operation Swordthrust I and II. In October SARATOGA entered the Mediterranean and rejoined the SIXTH Fleet where she completed her six month deployment.

The cruise came to an end when SARATOGA arrived in her home port of Mayport on 25 February 1961. SARATOGA had proved herself once again a ready warship and strong arm of America's defense by completing her deployment as scheduled, in spite of a serious fire, in one of her engine rooms on 23 January 1961. The fire, though brought under control expeditiously, took seven lives. Captain Roger W. Mehle, who had relieved Captain Fleming in November 1960 commended the crew on its spirit and proven battle-readiness.

After a few days in Mayport, SARATOGA steamed to the Norfolk Naval Shipyard in Portsmouth for repairs and alterations.

After her yard period, SARATOGA took on her ammunition at Norfolk and then, after a stay at her home port of Mayport, Florida, commenced six weeks of extensive training exercises in the Caribbean. After these exercises, SARATOGA returned to Mayport where, on August 23, 1961, the Commander of Carrier Division SIX, Rear Admiral Frederick J. Brush, embarked along with his staff. RADM Brush relieved RADM D. L. McDonald as COMCARDIV SIX in July 1961.

After operating in the Atlantic with the SECOND Fleet, SARATOGA departed from Mayport, Florida, on 28 November 1961 and deployed for her fourth tour of duty with the SIXTH Fleet in the Mediterranean.

Cannes

There was little tension in Cannes. Days and nights were easy and pleasurable, like a Renoir painting. For SARATOGA sailors have a place here; the people know our faces well enough and we can take our time with the city. We pass along La Rue Antibes, its shops, bars, brasseries . . . while the pretty girls on motor bikes flash by—and no one is amazed or anxious. It is in Cannes, most of all, that we appear not so much as boys away from home, but as cosmopolitan sailors.

1,573 POUNDS OF CLOTHING FOR FATHER DON MARIO BORRELLI'S . . . . . BOYS

Saratoga has now visited Naples four years in succession. The men have come to know and love the people of Naples, in particular the children. Upon returning to the U.S. from the 1960-61 Med cruise a plan was formulated by which Saratoga could further show its friendship and feeling for the Neapolitans. The Officers' Wives Club initiated a program to collect clothing for the urchins of the Casa Scugnizzo. Mrs. Roger W. Mehle spearheaded the drive which lasted from early Spring 1961 to summer's end. The wives spent many hours collecting the clothes, having them dry cleaned and repaired. The clothes were packed in boxes and stored aboard Saratoga.

In November 1961 Saratoga hoisted anchor and again steamed West. After visiting several other ports she returned to the enchantment of Naples. Because of choppy waters the boats were loaded with much difficulty and the shipment transferred into ship's vehicles. A group of officers and men, as well as several members of the Wives Club, deposited the 1,573 pounds of clothing in the four-walled shelter Father Borrelli had founded. The children were delighted and their eyes sparkled also at the sight of hot consomme, turkey dinners, milk, pastries and other goodies served by the men of Saratoga who played host while the children were the pampered guests. Their laughter could be heard ringing thru the bleak stone walls. The day finally came to an end and the men returned to the ship with smiling faces, looking forward to another visit next year.

All that turkey can sure make a Man thirsty! This candid shot was taken of one of the children of the Casa Scugnizzo during a turkey dinner feast provided by the officers and men of the U.S. Aircraft Carrier Saratoga.

In addition to the clothing, which weighed over 1,500 pounds, the officers and men of Saratoga accompanied the gift with a turkey dinner feast which was served to the children of the Casa Scugnizzo. Surrounding Father Borrelli in the photograph are Captain V. G. Lambert, Commanding Officer of the Saratoga (left) his wife, Mrs. V. G. Public Information Officer	LCDR Frank Cramblet

"An open letter:

The editor and staff of this year's cruise book is in debt to so many people for making this book possible, that it's almost impossible to list them all. But, here goes, anyway, and if we forget anyone, please know that you still have our thanks.

It's hard to tell just how many pictures there are in this cruise book, but one look is all you need to see that there are many. Our thanks to Chief Photographer I. B. Sherman who took the great majority of the pictures in this book. Needless to say, you would have just seen a lot of blank pages were it not for him. And though our thanks may begin and end with Chief Sherman, we are in debt to the entire Photo Lab: to Mr. Smith, for his whole-hearted support of our cruise book program and who saw to it that we were supplied with pictures for our every need. To Chief Montelongo, whose interest helped our spirits during those inevitable low moments, and who contributed some good pictures of his own. And to the other photographers and men in the Photo Lab - Bonte, Pitts, Lewis, Schulz, Perry, George, Lovasz . . . and everyone else . . . thank you.

Special thanks, indeed, must go to Special Services for helping financially with the cost of this book.

And a world of thanks to the Division Sales representatives, who did a wonderful job in selling this book for us.

And thanks also to our Publisher's representative, Mr. Lloyd Hanson.

And to the unnamed . . . but not forgotten . . . thank you."
